Overstreet says dog owners are responsible for pets' actions

Kevin Overstreet is a man that wears many hats for the City of Lubbock. He heads the offices of Home Land Security, Emergency Management and probably none for prominent at the present than Animal Control. With a rash of dog attacks on both humans and other animals, animal control is a big concern in Lubbock. Not only is it a concern inside the city limits, it is a big problem for people living in the rural county area.

According to Overstreet pet owners are going to be held more accountable for their pets. The city has current leash laws that are will be strictly enforced. Also, the state recently passed a law that holds the owner of a dog that injures a person off their property criminally liable. That means the owner could go to prison for 10 to 20 years depending on the severity of the attack. Lubbock brought charges on an individual this past month for an attack that happened last fall.

Dog owners are urged to keep animals secure on their property and to us a leash when walking a dog.

Along with Kevin, Cathleen Finley of his office presented the program and answered questions at the end of their presentation.

AmTryke Training Day

We are sponsoring an AmTryke training day on Thursday, Feb. 28, at South Plains Rehabilitation Center, from 4 to 8 p.m. The educational training is open the therapists in this area to teach them about the AmTryke and how to fit a child to the appropriate AmTryke. Therapists earn Continuing Education credits for participating.

Approximately 20 therapists have registered to attend the training. The registration fee is $35 and $25 of the fee will be used to purchase a year's Friends membership to AMBUCS.

Club members are needed to attend the last hour or so of the session to help out. Contact Patty Vannoy 799-6045 for more info.
